MAYOR'S MESSAGE

MAYOR MAHER MASO

Look through this issue for details on where to park and what to do once you get here. To all of you who have volunteered to help, thank you! Frisco is built with the support and help of our residents and this is yet another example of our community coming together.

As I write this article, I am at the annual U.S. Conference of Mayors meeting. This is an opportunity for Frisco to work with other cities, both large and small, in efforts that help our residents. There are many common issues mayors throughout our country agree on, such as unfunded mandates. Unfunded mandates are those laws and regulations passed by Congress and imposed on taxpayers, who are left to pay for them through local taxes. This is a common practice both at the state and federal levels where those governmental bodies take credit for not raising taxes yet put the burden on local governments to add local fees and taxes to pay for such mandates. Our city council works hard to represent you at all levels to stop unfunded mandates. As part of our legislative agenda, we're committed to monitoring and taking action against legislation proposing additional tax burdens on our residents.

Another key focus area for mayors throughout our country is job creation and growth. In Frisco, we have been very successful at creating new jobs. I believe in 'local control' to allow us to continue creating jobs for our residents and we must always be on the lookout for laws that impact our ability to do so. Job creation is one of our council's top priorities for our

Citizen's Fire Academy program graduates latest class; next opportunity to participate in fall

From the classroom to the burn house, the latest graduates of the Citizen's Fire Academy learned a lot about what it is like to walk in a firefighter's boots.

Citizen's Fire Academy (CFA) demonstrates how first responders' jobs go way beyond putting out fires. Firefighters also respond to medical emergencies, contain HAZMAT situations and manage the city's Emergency Operations Center (EOC), to name a few of the tasks they tackle

CFA students dress in bunker gear and experience what it is like to walk through the city's "Burn House" facility. It's the same building all Frisco firefighters use while they train to rescue citizens from burning buildings.

CFA is a free program through the Frisco Fire Department. Look for information online at FriscoFire.com about registration for CFA Class No. 28, happening this fall.

CFA classes will meet Thursday nights for nine weeks from September 15 through November 10. The program is open to anyone living or working within Frisco's city limits.

Lone Star Storytelling Festival looking for local talent

Have you ever been told that you are a "born storyteller?" Now you have the chance to showcase your skills. Frisco Public Library staff soon will be reviewing audition materials from those ages 19 and older looking for potential rising stars to take the stage at the 8th Annual Lone Star Storytelling Festival on October 15.

No experience is necessary. "Some of the usual suspects might be those who have already taken the open mike opportunity at storytelling festivals, or are always called on to emcee whenever there's a special event or the opportunity to 'roast' a colleague," said Rebecca Belknap, Adult Services Manager at Frisco Public Library.

Audition forms are accepted through August 31, 2011. YouTube URLs and DVD recordings are both accepted formats for auditions and must be no longer than five minutes.

For full details and audition forms, go to FriscoLibrary.com, or go to the library's first or fourth floor reference desk. For more information contact Rebecca Belknap, rbelknap@friscotexas.gov, 972-292-5669.
